Small Industry Day (SID) was observed on 30th Aug 2018 at Alagappa University. The university as part of celebrating the International/National days of importance, has entrusted the conduct of the program to the Department of Logistics Management. Prof.M.Senthil, Head of the department of logistics management, while welcoming the gathering has mentioned that the Small industry's contribution to the economy is increasing of late, especially in the digital era and the celebration is more important and useful to the budding managers in the logistics space.

Prof. N.Rajendran, Vice–Chancellor of Alagappa university, who presided over the day long celebrations, has applauded the strong and powerful contributions of the departments in the School of Management towards the growth of the university. He opined that the students who are logged on to the books will become good students and unconventional thinkers will become successful managers/businessmen. He advised the students to go a mile beyond the lessons which will help them to achieve greater strides. He emphasized that the memory, creativity and imagination does come to fore in the sphere of knowledge and is essential in today's management.

"Small Industry day celebrations should not be a ritual one instead should converted into action. Towards this the Alagappa University has established 15 Start-ups cells in various school of the university " he said. Normally the start –ups stories are unconventional and he advised the audience to do business as entrepreneurs and impart skills the stakeholders in the society. He applauded the inspiring presence of Mr.V.Pandiraja I.R.S. an illustrious alumni of the university.

Mr.V.Pandiraja I.R.S. Joint Commissione, CGST & Central Excise, Madurai who inaugurated SID - 2018 celebrations was focusing on the evolution of taxation in India right from ancient days by quoting references from Manu Smiriti and Arthasastra to the present day GST. During the year 2016-2017 the indirect tax collection was slightly more than the direct tax collection. Central Excise followed by Service tax and Customs form the core of indirect tax collections. He deliberated upon the pre-GST tax reality, which involved Intra-State trade, Inter-State trade , Origin based trade. He dwelled upon the background of GST in India and discussed the situations on other countries, which has embraced GST in their soil. He explained how the CGST, SGST and integrated GST amalgamated into GST for smoothening the tax collections of the Central and State governments. He highlighted the salient features of GST and explained the usefulness of GST for the future of Small industries in India. The importance of E-Way bill was emphasized by him and it was very useful to the budding managers of the university.

Prof M.Selvam, Member of the Syndicate of the University delivered the special address on Start-ups. He traced the growth of mega corporates like Google, Yahoo, Tesla which had a humble beginning us startups or SMEs. He stated that the growth of the Silicon Valley was propelled by the SMEs and Start-ups to a great extent.

Prof. V.Balachandran, Special Officer (P&D) who felicitated the celebrations, brought out the advantages to the SMEs due to the recent changes in the tax regime in the country.

Dr.V.Sivakumar , Dr.P.Rajan Chinna and Dr.V.A.Anand made the arrangements for the SID-2018. Dr.V.Sivakumar. Associate Professor, DoLM has proposed vote of thanks.
