ALAGAPPA UNIVERSITY

Alagappa University was established in the year May 1985 by a Special Act of Government of Tamil Nadu 1985. With the objective of fostering research and dissemination of knowledge in various branches of learning. The University is named after Padma Bhushan (Late) Dr. R.M. Alagappa Chettiar. It is recognized by University Grants Commission. It is a member of Association of Indian Universities as well as member of Association of Common wealth Universities. It has the motto of "EXCELLENCE IN ACTION" and keeps the vision of excellence in all spheres of education. It has 10 Schools comprising 23 departments, 6 Centres and 2 Constituent Colleges and 37 affiliated colleges in the revenue districts of Sivagangai and Ramanathapuram. The University is reaccredited with 'A' grade by the National Assessment and Accreditation Council.

The Host Institution

The Centre for Women's Studies was established in 1989 as the first University Grants Commission approval Centre in Tamil Nadu. A multi-pronged approach is called for all at levels in developing, strengthening, and harnessing the female resource of the country. Women's Studies despite being the most unconventional and a new entrant into academic, is simultaneously a discourse, a methodology and an agenda for action. The Centre is playing quite significant role in channelizing the major thrust areas like, Teaching, Training, Research, Field Action, Documentation, Publication and Advocacy. The Alagappa University has Department of Women's Studies and Centre for Women's Studies with symbiotic relationship.

Background of the Conference

Social transformation is the process by which an individual alters the socially ascribed social status into a socially achieved status for themselves. However another definition refers to large scale social change as in cultural reforms or transformations. The first occurs with the individual, the second with the social system. Women need to be part of the political, social and economic transformations taking place across the world. Unless these processes involve women, women will merely become recipients of change rather than agents of change.

Despite progress over the years where women perform visible and instrumental roles in certain contexts and stages of social transformation, there is still widespread evidence of the continued exclusion of women from the critical decisions that shape the outcomes of these transformations. However, expanding women's rights and their ability to influence their environment goes beyond the formal political channels, which are often limited by unfavourable institutional structures as well as social norms and beliefs regarding gender roles. Obviously, the promotion of women as agents of change is a battle for recognition and participation which women themselves must continue to demand. How effectively their demands are addressed will be determined by how conscious women are of their exclusion, and how much they see themselves as the agents of the change that they would like to see in their lives and societies. Just Society will be one in which our populations will be encouraged to assume the full rights of citizenship through policies which will give them both greater responsibility for their own future and more meaningful equality of opportunity.

Now, the women in India are heading towards advancement and by dint of their devotion, dedication and determination, and play a vital role in the transformation of the nation socially. The question now is : how can we catalyze transformative change that can empower women and girls effectively and sustainably.
